On three consecutive Saturdays in November (12, 19, and 26), 2011, CAPE once again offered its annual Language and Culture Seminar. Participants commented that they found the seminar lectures to be excellent updates on current affairs, delivered in a very short space of time. This year, the Language and Culture Seminar was held on September 7, 2011, in conjunction with APC, and featured distinguished lecturers from various professional and academic disciplines. Participants from various professional and academic disciplines joined CAPE at the 22nd Language and Culture Seminar, Fall 2011.

Taiwan, Japan, Korea, and the Philippines attending 23 various programs throughout the year, bringing our grand total to over 10,000 participants from 16 different countries. Scholars and university students joined us in sunny Honolulu to improve their English skills, gain new professional skills, and pursue opportunities for international experience as they broadened their cultural horizons. CAPE was able to support many of its students with a total of 49 grants, merit awards, fellowships, and subsidies to defray living expenses.

CAPE was especially busy during the summer months. Seven groups of current and future English teachers attended workshops for Asian-Pacific Teachers of English, and for Elementary Teachers of English, to increase their professional credentials even as they polished their English language skills. Participants in the 74th Workshop (for non-elementary teachers) came from Korea and Japan independently, though the remaining groups were sponsored by universities or Offices of Education. The Kwangju City Office of Education sponsored the 75th Workshop for Asian-Pacific Teachers of English as well as the 20th Workshop for Elementary Teachers of English. Sookmyung University similarly sponsored two groups for longer sessions lasting up to two months, the 77th Workshop and 21st Workshop (Elementary Teachers). The Jeonbok Office of Education sponsored on large group for the month-long 78th Workshop. Finally, the International Graduate School of English in Seoul, Korea, continuing its 8-year relationship with CAPE, sent a group of its graduate students for a two-month-long workshop, the 76th Workshop for Asian-Pacific Teachers of English.

The Workshops are tailored to participants’ needs, depending on the levels at which they will be teaching. Lectures were taught by faculty from the departments of Linguistics and Second Language Studies at UH-Manoa, and covered a spectrum of practical classroom issues such as teaching English reading skill, the role of English as an international language, and how to incorporate communicative language activities into lessons. Participants found these talks “inspiring” and “very student-centered,” so we believe they returned to their own classrooms filled with new ideas. The teachers’ workshops always include visits to local elementary, middle, and high schools, both public and private. These give participants a first-hand glimpse of authentic American classrooms. Feedback indicates that participants in our programs last year enjoyed these immensely, commenting on the positive ways in which teachers and students interacted.

Three groups of nurse trainees joined CAPE’s unique workshops aimed at providing international learning opportunities to nursing students. First, two groups of nursing students participated in CAPE’s International Programs for College Nursing Students. The 53rd IPCNS (July 5-31) was sponsored by the Inje University and other nursing colleges, and consisted of 28 nursing students wishing to improve their English skills and to tour healthcare facilities in Honolulu. They studied English and American culture and attending special lectures on nursing delivered by faculty from the UH School of Nursing. The second group, twenty nursing students from Sookmyung University, joined the 54th IPCNS, and stayed from July 18 to August 12. Both of these groups split their time between improving their English-language skills in classes taught by CAPE’s own capable ESL instructors. In addition, they heard lectures related to nursing issues, and toured medical facilities in Honolulu.

The third group of nurses joined one of CAPE’s unique programs, the 16th Workshop for Clinical Nurse Specialists, held November 2-11. Focusing on nursing and local health facilities only, this group of 28 professional nurses spent an intensive week hearing lectures of special interest to their field, and touring a total of seven local medical facilities, including Queen’s and Kaiser Permanente.

CAPE’s foundational event, the Annual American Studies Forum, took place from August 3-11, 2011. This year there was no single theme for the 31st annual forum; rather, a variety of topics were covered to reflect the complexity of American culture in these turbulent years of economic restructuring. Twenty-three participants from Japan, China, Korea, and the Philippines joined the Forum to hear lectures by UH faculty. They found the Forum “informative, provocative and engaging,” as well as “comprehensive and interesting.” CAPE has been offering this Forum since the first year of its existence, and looks forward to many more years of quality Forums.

CAPE hosted the 25th Annual “Asia Today” Series in April, featuring Hong Kong, Taiwan, as well as a special lecture by Dr. Deane Neubauer on the much-anticipated conference on Asia Pacific Economic Cooperation (APEC 2011 Hawai‘i) held in August. In November, CAPE once again offered its annual Language and Culture Seminar. The language component focused the new Khmer language program at UH, and linguistic diversity in the Solomon Islands; the culture component offered a glimpse into the workings of Fijian and Chinese societies.

Finally, for the last several years, CAPE has added the APC Luncheon Lecture Series to its roster of events. On September 7, 2011, Mr. Henk Rogers, founder of the Blue Planet Software, Inc., spoke at the 4th APC Luncheon Lecture. He delivered a talk titled “Twenty-one Days,” in which he addressed the challenges Hawai‘i would face if it ran out of its stores of oil, and his ideas for making the islands less dependent on this important resource.

In all, 2011 was another busy and eventful year. We at CAPE look forward to an equally productive and successful year in 2012.

dependence on carbon-based fuel.

Mr. Rogers spent only about twenty minutes talking about his ideas for the Blue Planet Foundation, and devoted most of the time to answering questions. Supported by a youthful audience member who helped with a few factual details, Mr. Rogers delivered an interesting talk on the limiations of solar and wind resources, and on a new technology that he supports, called Ocean Thermal Energy Conversion (OTEC), for which he holds great hopes. He believes that as oil prices continue to rise, interest in the form of investment will also increase, and OTEC may become a viable alternative energy source for the Hawaiian Islands.

CAPE is proud to have hosted one of Hawai‘i’s innovative thinkers and leaders at this Luncheon Lecture Series. We will be offering another Luncheon Lecture this year. Please look for our announcement in the summer months.
The Language component of the seminar consisted of Professor Chhany Saks-Humphry’s presentation of her work developing the world’s first textbooks and curriculum for teaching Khmer at the University of Hawai‘i, and a demonstration of the online resources she has created so that students of Khmer all over the world can progress in their studies. In addition, Tarcisius Tara Kabutaulaka spoke on the linguistic diversity of the Solomon Islands, and the kinds of challenges that such diversity imposes on the nation-building efforts of its government, schools, and society.

In the talks focusing on culture, Dr. Kabutaulaka spoke again, this time on how Fiji’s older traditions of coup and counter-coup have played out in its modern history of turbulent government turn-overs. Professor Daniel Y. W. Kwok showed how traditional Confucian mores still hold a surprising degree of sway in Chinese culture, and Dr. Cynthia Ning gave an enlightening talk on how an understanding of Chinese humor can lend us insight into that nation’s attitudes and actions. Finally, Professor Manfred Steger gave a talk on new trends in globalization and on the kinds of changes we may expect in the coming decades.

The Language and Culture Seminar are always well-received by audience members, who find them educational and informative. We all come away from these lectures with a fresh perspective of the Asia Pacific community, and CAPE is very proud of the longevity of these programs.

CAPE/APC Advisory Council and Board Year-End Dinner

Members of the CAPE/APC Advisory Council and Board of Directors attended a year-end dinner at the Royal Garden Chinese Restaurant on December 12, 2011. This annual event is held as an opportunity for CAPE’s leaders to look back on its accomplishments for the year, which this year included surpassing 10,000 total participants in CAPE programs since its inception in 1980. In attendance were Dr. Edward and Mrs. Kamaile Shultz; Dr. James T. and Mrs. Carilyn Shon; Mrs Diane Farias; Dr. Deane and Mrs. Keiko Neubauer; Dr. Ruth Ono; Mr. Matt Matsunaga and Erin Chisholm; Mr. John and Mrs. Heejin Chang; Mr. Richard and Mrs. Ethel Anbe; Mr. Myron and Mrs. Barbara Monte; and Dr. Jai-Ho and Mrs. Rosa Yoo.

The 31st Annual American Studies Forum

The 31st AASF was held on August 3-10, 2011, in facilities provided by UH-Manoa. The speakers included a roster of distinguished professors from various departments at the university. The forum was attended by 23 participants traveling from Japan, China, Korea, and the Philippines, some of whom described the event as “an unforgettable memory and experience!”

There was no central theme to the Forum, but with a variety of topics ranging from 19th-century missionaries in Hawai‘i to the appearance of computer prototypes in early 20th-century American literature to the economic recession of the last half-decade participants found the talks informative and provocative. From the Department of English, Professor Craig Howes spoke on celebrity, notoriety, “reality,” and fame in America; in a second talk he addressed how public figures use autobiography and biography to justify earlier decisions. Professor John Rieder took his listeners on a tour of invasion plots in American science fiction.

Dr. Robert Perkinson, of the Department of American Studies, talked about race relations in the Obama era; his colleague Dr. Jeffrey Tripp offered his listeners a look at how “bad guys” have evolved in popular American film.

Two guest speakers from Japan, Ms. Tsuneko Sano and Dr. Hirosi Tsuchiya, also delivered talks. Ms. Sano talked about missionaries in 19th-century Hawai‘i, and Dr. Tsuchiya about prototypical computers found in American literature. Finally, Dr. Deane Neubauer, Professor Emeritus of the Department of Political Science, rounded out the list with two talks. One talk addressed the shifting base of modern American politics, and the second, the end of globalization in the form it has taken in the last few decades.

This American Studies Forum, the longest-standing of any of CAPE’s programs, is our foundational event. It provides an opportunity for international scholars of American Studies to come together to explore the themes and stories of American literature, society, and history. As a forum for the exchange of ideas across international borders, it exemplifies the ideals of the CAPE venture.
The 74th Workshop for Asian-Pacific Teachers of English

CAPE’S 74th Workshop for Asian-Pacific Teachers of English took place from Aug 2-11, 2011. Six English teachers from Japan and Korea spent an intensive week listening to lectures from distinguished faculty in the departments of Linguistics and Second Language Studies of the University of Hawai‘i-Manoa. Topics included Teaching English Reading Skills, led by Dr. Graham Crookes; Motivating Foreign Language Learners, by Dr. Richard Schmidt; and Strategies for Teaching Vocabulary, by Dr. Sandra McKay. We thank these teachers for their informative lectures, as well as Dr. James Brown, Dr. Robert Gibson, Dr. Richard Day, Mr. Makoto Omori, and Dr. Hanh Thi Nguyen.

The 75th Workshop for Asian-Pacific Teachers of English

For a month from July 27-Aug 18, 2011, fifteen secondary English teachers from Kwangju City, Korea, supported by the Kwangju Office of Education, with chaperones Ms. Hwanna Lee and Ms. Juhyun Park, participated in a workshop that combined English classes, professional lectures, and school and cultural visits. During their stay, mornings were spent polishing English skills or attending lectures on such topics as English language communicative teaching methods and evaluation. Participants also enjoyed their visits to Farrington High School, Kaiser High School, and Kalakaua Middle School. We thank Principals Alfredo Carganilla, John Sosa, and Lorelei Karasaki for making these visits possible, and we thank the teachers and students at these schools for their warm hospitality. In addition, we convey the thanks of the participants to their lecturers, including Ms. Eriza Bareng, Dr. James D. Brown, Dr. Graham Crookes, Dr. Richard Day, Dr. Robert Gibson, Dr. Sandra McKay, Mr. Mike Misner, Mr. Myron Monte, Dr. Hanh Thi Nguyen, and Dr. Richard Schmidt.

Twenty-six English Teachers, with chaperone Mr. Junghoon Kim, sponsored by the International Graduate School of English (IGSE) came from Gyeonggi Province, Korea, for two months of training from July 11-Aug 25, 2011. This long visit allowed them to hear extensive lectures, as well as greatly polish their English language skills in a workshop offered by CAPE. They spent the morning hours in class, receiving lectures from UH SLS and linguistics faculty, including Dr. James D. Brown, Dr. Graham Crookes, Dr. Richard Day, Dr. Robert Gibson, Dr. Sandra McKay, Dr. Hanh Thi Nguyen, Dr. Richard Schmidt and Dr. Dongping Zheng. Their English/Culture and teaching technique classes were led by Ms. Hanbyul Jung, Mr. Myron Monte, Mr. Makoto Omori, Ms. Bonnie Sylvester, Mr. Jeffrey Tripp, and Ms. Diana Tsuchida. In addition, they were given the opportunity to visit schools to observe classes and meet some of their future American colleagues. We extend our thanks to to Principal Justin Mew and the English Department Head Mrs. Gwen Lee at Niu Valley School; Principal Ann Mahi and SID Coordinator Ms. Caroline Tolentino at Roosevelt High School; Director of Admissions Ms. Karen Curry at St. Francis School; and Principal Michael Harano at Washington Middle School.

Another group of 14 secondary school English teachers joined us for a two-month-long workshop from July 8-Aug 28, 2011. They came from Gyeonggi Province with their chaperone Ms. Miran Cho, under the sponsorship of Sookmyung University. They attended English classes, as well as lectures by faculty from the departments of Linguistics and Second Language Studies at UH-Manoa. They also visited three of Honolulu’s middle schools. We thank Dole Middle School Principal Annie Kikkawa and Reading Curriculum Coordinator Patti L. Laba; and Stevenson Middle School Principal Rodney Luke and Vice-Principal Howard Chi for their warm hospitality to our students.

The Jeonbuk Office of Education sponsored 30 secondary school English teachers, along with chaperone Dr. Hong-Won Seo, for a month-long workshop from July 4-30, 2011, to finish up an intensive teacher-training course. They finished their training in Hawai‘i’s with lectures on teaching and learning theories, practical classroom techniques, methods, fluency, interaction, and motivation, as well as teaching skills for reading, vocabulary, and writing. Like the other groups, this one visited local schools where they gained much from meeting and interacting with their colleagues and their students. Our thanks to workshop teachers Ms. Eriza Bareng, Dr. James D. Brown, Dr. Graham Crookes, Dr. Robert Gibson, Mr. Kenton Harsch, Ms. Hanbyul Jung, Dr. Sandra McKay, Mr. Myron Monte, Mr. Makoto Omori, Dr. Richard Schmidt, Dr. Dongping Zheng. We also thank the students, faculty, and principals at Maryknoll School (Director of Special Programs Mr. Dan Nagami); Mid-Pacific Institute (Summer School Director Ms. Marilyn Shigetani); and Punahou School (Director Casey Agena).

The 20th Workshop for Elementary Teachers of English

The Kwangju Office of Education sponsored 13 elementary school teachers of English from Kwangju City to attend a teachers’ workshop from July 27-Aug 18, 2011. Escorting by Mr. Michael Rabidge, they heard lectures on various topics by UH faculty, including Dr. James D. Brown, Dr. Graham Crookes, Dr. Robert Gibson, and Dr. Sandra McKay. Topics included strategies for teaching vocabulary, and meaningfulness in classroom language learning, and assessment techniques. On their behalf, we thank the teachers, administrators, and students at Aina Haina Elementary School (Principal, Mr. Brendan Burns) and Queen Kaahumanu Elementary School (Principal, Ms. Holly Kiyonaga and Grade 4 teacher Ms. Sherry Takenishi). Mahalo as well to Dr. James D. Brown, Dr. Graham Crookes, Dr. Richard Day, Dr. Robert Gibson, Mr. Gavin Furukawa, Ms. Hanbyul Jung, Dr. Sandra McKay, Mr. Mike Misner, Mr. Myron Monte, Dr. Hanh Thi Nguyen, Mr. Makoto Omori, Dr. Richard Schmidt & Dr. Dongping Zheng.

The 53rd International Program for College Nursing Students

Twenty-eight nursing students from Inje and other nursing colleges came to Honolulu from July 5 to 31, 2011, escorted by Dr. Hye-Ryoung Kim and Professor Yoon-Jung Koo. They were divided into two groups, Gold and Cream Classes, for English language and culture courses, coming together for special lectures and hospital visits. Mr. Danial Jackson, Ms. Diana Emiko Tsuchida, and Mrs. Aileen Moriwake taught English and American culture to the Gold group; Mr. Jackson and Mrs. Moriwake taught the Cream group. The special lectures delivered by faculty from the University of Hawai‘i. We thank Ms. Gail Okamura (‘Compassionate Caring’); Dr. Pat Nishimoto (Nursing Leadership in Action: At Work and in the Community); Dr. John Casken (‘Overview of the US Health Care System and Nursing Education in the US’); and Professor Verna Hanashiro (‘Roles of RN/CNS/Nurse Practitioners’) for their excellent and informative lectures. Finally, CAPE arranged for these future nurses to visit several nursing facilities in the area. We thank Lydia Chock at Maluhia Hospital; Sai Chantavy

CAPE hosted an international group of university students for the month of August 1-27, 2011, as they came to Honolulu to hone their English language skills and explore these lovely islands. Forty-eight students from a variety of schools including Kanazawa Medical University and Matsuyama Shinonome College in Japan, Tongwon College, and Honam University in Korea, attended classes in the mornings that covered English language and American culture. They spent the afternoons completing assignments designed to let them become familiar with the history and culture of Hawai‘i, visiting such places as the State Capitol and Iolani Palace, the Bishop Museum, and the Arizona Memorial. A major goal of these assignments is for students to speak with local residents to gain information about Hawai‘i and the United States, and to have an opportunity for real communication and exchange. We hope they benefitted from the experience.

The 62nd International Program for College Students

Participants in the 62nd Program for College Students, with Ms. Eriza Bareng, Mr. Daniel Jackson, Dr. Elizabeth Koh, Mr. Miguel Llora, Mrs. Aileen Moriwake, and Ms. Diana Tsuchida, August 2011.

The 54th International Program for College Nursing Students

Seahyuk University sent twenty nursing students to participate in CAPE’s Program for College Nursing Students from July 18 to August 12, 2011. They were chaperoned by Professor Eun-Hee Peek. They made visits to four facilities in Honolulu, including Maluhia Hospital, Leahi Hospital, the Straub Clinic, and the Queen’s Medical Center. We are grateful to the staff and administrators at these institutions, including, respectively, Lydia Chock, GailOkamura, Betty Karratti, and Makana Shook, for taking time to arrange tours for our students. We also wish to thank Ms. Gail Okamura, Dr. Pat Nishimoto, Dr. John Casken, and Professor Verna Hanashiro for delivering their informative lectures to this group. Finally, thanks go to Mrs. Aileen Moriwake, Mr. Mike Misner, and Ms. Eriza Bareng for their English language and American culture instruction.
